In February 2014, a group of amputee veterans set forth on a monumental goal for recovery, to climb the world's tallest free-standing mountain: Mt. Kilimanjaro (19341 ft).

Consisting of six amputees and five wingman climbers, the Kilimanjaro Warriors hiked the mountain for eight days overcoming insurmountable obstacles and new challenges with each passing mile; trusting that if you have heart and believe in yourself, anything is possible.

"Determined. Inspirational. It almost makes me feel like I'm underachieving."
- The Weather Channel

"For six wounded soldiers, scaling the tallest mountain in Africa wasn't just an adventure of a lifetime, it was a testament to their true grit."
- ABC News

"Awesome. Truly Inspirational."
- Fox and Friends
